

MASTER OF SCIENCE IN HEALTH CARE INFORMATICS & INFORMATION MANAGEMENT

DEGREE PROGRAM

The use of electronic information plays a critical role in reducing medical errors and decreasing costs, ultimately leading to happier, healthier patients. But the systems don't run themselves. Regis University's Master of Science in Health Care Informatics & Information Management (MS-HIIM) program will prepare you to ensure that health care systems deliver timely and accurate information, in the correct format, while meeting regulatory requirements. The MS-HIIM program is designed for current health care professionals looking to expand their knowledge of systems implementation, work flow design, systems planning, security management, and electronic health information management. Beyond IT, the program also includes curriculum focused on project management, leadership development, ethics, and managing digital information, all taught from the health care perspective.
