

Human Resource Management

You're an advocate for others, and the dignity of all workers has real meaning for you. You believe organizations should behave with humanity and ethics in interactions with customers and employees, and you have a strong desire to be a leader in ensuring morally sound behavior is carried out in the workplace. You also want to learn the most effective business practices to advance your human-centered career.

Lead institutional change for a 21st-century workforce.

Graduates of the human resource management program find themselves skilled as critical thinkers and problem solvers, able to identify and resolve problems as they relate to people and their interactions. If you're looking to cultivate your leadership skills and make a significant impact within an organization by applying leadership techniques and strategic management philosophies, the M.S. in Human Resource Management from Regis University is the program for you.
