

Master of Arts

As a Master of Arts student at Regis, you'll focus on ethical and social development through one of six specialization areas. Opportunities for self-reflection, critical and creative thinking, community outreach and service learning are foundational dimensions of the program regardless of specialization.

Specializations

| Applied Psychology

Develop your ability to study, understand and solve problems that arise in the context of human behavior, such as public health issues, organizational issues in the workplace, and problems in educational settings.

| Communication

Nothing is accomplished without clear, effective communication. Hone your existing skills as you explore how communication affects all aspects of human life, including relationships, conflict and leadership.

| Creative Writing

Examine the style, form and function of great literary works from various periods and places, as you apply these principles to your own craft and develop new strategies for your ongoing writing practice.

| Environmental Studies

Explore humanity's rightful place within its bio-physical environment as you examine environmental issues and sustainability solutions from a dynamic interdisciplinary perspective.

| Literature

Discover how novels, nonfiction, plays and poetry are not only creations of individual writers or products of their specific historical time and place, but also agents of cultural change.

| Religious Studies

Religious institutions and religious faith have been driving forces behind human activity for thousands of years. Explore the impact religion continues to have on politics, culture, justice, media and more.
