

Religious Studies Specialization

Religious institutions and religious faith have been driving forces behind human activity for thousands of years. We invite you to explore the impact religion continues to have on politics, culture, justice, media and more. Religious traditions are rooted in history, yet in the modern world they are constantly affected by the forces of globalization and social change.

Explore the frontier of faith, reason and culture.

We encourage our students to seek truth, to live purposeful lives and to use course content to continuously examine and attempt to answer the question: "How ought we to live?" As an M.A. student pursuing a specialization in religious studies, you will have the opportunity to analyze broad questions about culture, social justice and radically divergent ways of life by studying how religions are and have been expressed, perceived and practiced.
