

Project Leadership and Management MBA

No matter what the situation calls for, organizations need leaders, organizers and problem solvers. Using creativity and available resources, leaders find solutions to difficult problems, while inspiring others around them to follow a shared vision and achieve common goals. The Project Leadership and Management MBA at Regis University can help you refine your organizational acumen and advance your career, no matter what field you're in.

Refine Your Project Management Skills

A graduate degree in business with a focus on project management will sharpen your existing skills and help you apply them in the real world. Whether mapping out strategies, building timelines, identifying methodologies or keeping to tight deadlines, you'll gain a set of practical skills that are in high demand across diverse sectors. As you build your project management expertise, you'll stand out in your current organization and gain the attention of employers who seek to optimize their processes and streamline operations.
