A TRADITION OF SERVICE
Service to our communities in the field of counseling necessitates a broad understanding of the social, political and cultural influences that shape our lives. Students wrestle with how best to incorporate theories and techniques of change into the practice of creating therapeutic relationships. They help to foster hope and courage in those we serve, people who strive to live more productive and just lives.

Program Overview

Designed to be completed in three years, the program accepts up to 15 students per annual cohort, ensuring personalized attention and a supportive learning environment. Perfect for those seeking to balance their professional and academic commitments, our program prepares graduates for both advanced clinical roles and academic/research positions.

Example Courses

Doctoral Internship in Counseling
Advanced Multicultural, Ethical and Legal Issues in Counseling
Leadership and Advocacy in Counselor Education and Supervision
Dissertation/Capstone Portfolio

TOTAL: 60 CREDIT HOURS

Note: Applicants must hold a master's degree from a program aligned with CACREP standards, including 700 clinical hours and 60 credit hours. For those with different graduate backgrounds, faculty will provide individualized guidance to meet the CACREP core standards.

Still need to earn a master's degree?

Regis offers two nationally recognized graduate programs in counseling and family therapy. The Master of Arts in Counseling (MAC) and Master of Arts in Marriage and Family Therapy (MFT) are highly interactive programs, designed to help students develop a strong foundational knowledge of best practices and therapeutic skills, from a systemic and relational framework.
