PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Graduate Assistant, Saint Louis University

Summer of 2015

Assisted Stephanie Solomon, a faculty member in the Center for Health Care Ethics, on her syllabus development and research interests. Together, we collaborated on the development of a syllabus for an undergraduate course focused on the history and relationship between the American research establishment and African Americans. Additionally, I aided in her research regarding responsible conduct of research and training for graduate students in the area of teaching responsible conduct and acceptable behavior in research.

Graduate Assistant, Saint Louis University

July 2012- July 2013

Assisted the Director of the Center for Health Care Ethics, Jeffrey Bishop, with multiple projects. These projects included research on a potential book about transhumanism, a joint publication on issues concerning efficacy and efficiency in delivering ICU care, and a joint book review on the history of bioethics.

Senior Patient and Liaison Services Associate: Support Resources, Pancreatic Cancer Action Network

July 2010- July 2012

Responsible for the case management of pancreatic cancer patients. Additionally responsible for maintaining and expanding the support resources available to patients, managing volunteer groups, volunteer interviews, volunteer selection and the development of ways to improve the program as a whole.

Patient and Liaison Services Associate, Pancreatic Cancer Action Network

2009- July 2010

Responsible for the education and support of pancreatic cancer patients and caregivers. Including providing patients and caregivers with information on specialist in their area, common treatment options for different stages and types of pancreatic cancer, and support resources local to patients. Additionally in charge of a local resource project aimed at finding cancer specific resources in communities across the country and responsible in-person support group updates for all pancreatic cancer specific support groups in the United States.
